ALBERT U. WYMAN.

The autograph of Albert U. Wyman, is valued by its possessor in proportion to its frequency; the more signatures by this gentleman the more money. If the reader will take the trouble to examine a greenback of recent make, he will find a veritable specimen of Mr. Wyman's handwriting upon it. No public officer has duties to perform interesting more people than the quiet and retiring gentleman whose portrait appears above. Everybody will be glad to know something more about him than his signature and portrait can give.

He was born in Canada about fifty five years ago, of American parents who had crossed the border on a visit. His boyhood was spent in Madison, Wisconsin, where he received a sound and good education, and afterwards learned the printing business in the establishment owned by his father. In due time he became a partner in the printing firm of Wyman & Sons. He was first given an office in the year 1863, when he was placed in the Treasury at Washington with a salary of twelve hundred dollars a year. Mr. Wyman has continued in the same department ever since that date, and is a representative of the efficiency which is induced by constant attention to one class of duties during a long period of time. His first promotion of note was several years after he had held a clerkship. He was then appointed Assistant-Cashier of the Treasury. In time he rose to be Cashier. The next step was his being made Assistant-Treasurer of the United States. On the resignation of Mr. Gilliam, in March, 1883, he was given the Treasury, and the duties of which, he assumed April 1, 1883. It would be superfluous to add that Mr. Wyman's long apprenticeship prepared him fully for the performance of his present duties, which are both arduous and responsible. He has to account for the hundreds of millions of dollars which flow into and out of the Treasury each year. In personal appearance Treasurer Wyman is tallish and well-formed. His countenance indicates ability, refinement and exceeding gentleness and sympathy. He is modest and quiet in his manner, and avoids rather than seeks public attention. Age has sprinkled his hair and beard with gray hairs.

How They Worked Him

Charles D. Haines, the owner of the new district telegraph system, had just got his new district telegraph into the Galt House yesterday as an experiment, in order to show how the system works, when Eli Perkins arrived. Everybody was on tip-toe around the hotel to see how the novelty worked. It seems there is a message box in each room in the hotel. This message box almost talks with the office. The guest, by simply turning the revolving button on the disc of the message box to "hot water," will have it put down at his door in an instant; and so in the same manner by turning the button to "ice water," "cigars," "wine," "seitzer," "doctor" or "fire," he can have these commodities sent to his room without speaking or even getting off his bed. Eli Perkins was so innocently curious to see how the thing worked that he sent the Louisville boys, headed by Mr. Haines, volunteered to go up to their room and explain it to him.

"Now," they said, "you just turn that button to 'cigars' and see them come up."

Eli innocently turned the button and instantly five fragrant cigars came through the door.

"That is wonderful!" said Eli artlessly, "and if I pull it to 'wine' will come up?"

"Certainly," the boys said, "try it." Eli tried it and a bottle of champagne, with the cork out and ready to pop, surrounded by five glasses came into the room.

"Well, that beats me!" exclaimed Eli, as the boys filled the glasses and passed the wine around. "That is wonderful, w-o-o-d-e-r-f-u-l!"

After Mr. Perkins had recovered from his astonishment he inquired what "special" meant on the disc.

"Try it!" the boys said. Eli pulled the button to special, and in came Mayor Bridwell and Mr. Brentand President of the City Council of Evansville.

"What did you send for us for?" they asked almost out of breath.

"I don't know," said Eli, "I simply turned it to special."

The boys explained that special was a special call for the two Evansville gentlemen.

"Now you're here," said Eli, after they had been introduced, "the boys will show you how this wonderful telegraph works."

Then the boys pulled the button around to cigars and wine again, and they came up in a jiffy.

A Startling Statement.

Only a few weeks ago a gentleman on the inside intimated to us that we need not be surprised to hear of startling developments in the management of the State's affairs at any time. He said he could tell a tale or two which would astound every citizen in the Commonwealth.—Owensboro Messenger.

We have of late noticed a number of similar insinuations reflecting upon the integrity of our State officials and confess our surprise that fair-minded men of intelligence, would write such trash. Now if this gentleman who is represented as being on the "inside," knew of any improper use of the State funds by any State official, why didn't he give names and facts, of what he is on the "inside" of? Let him speak out. There are but two State officials who handle much of the State funds, the Auditor and Treasurer, in fact the law requires that all the revenues of the State pass through their hands. It is the business of the former to see that the revenues of the State are promptly collected and paid over to him, whose duty is to pay over what he receives to the Treasurer.—When once in the custody of the Treasurer it can only be, lawfully, paid out on the draft or warrant of the Auditor. Now is there a man in the State that believes Treasurer Tate would purloin the funds of the State, or that Auditor Hewitt would make fraudulent drafts upon the Treasurer. Would they do such a thing the wretch would be easily detected by any man of ordinary business intelligence by an inspection of their books; and these books and papers are examined by committees every session of the General Assembly and never has a single error, much less a fraud been found to exist.

How Sealskin is Prepared.

[From the San Francisco Chronicle.]

Few of those wearing a sealskin sacque have any knowledge of the process by which the skins are prepared for use. Seen when first taken from the animal they little resemble the warm, glossy skins worn upon our streets, for until dyed and cured, they are of a light brown hue, coarse and full of sand. Before becoming valuable they are shaved down on the flesh side until not thicker than paper, the long hairs are all pulled out, and the fur dyed. The cost of the article is due to the labor expended upon it. The raw skins are sold in London, where the fishing is done, and then shipped back to America, where they are sold with a heavy duty added. The killing season of Alaska begins about the 12th of June, and the 100,000 skins are usually ready for shipment a month later. The work of slaughtering the animals is done by the natives who live upon the St. Paul and St. George Islands and the process is an interesting one. When the animals are wanted the natives go to the rookeries, station themselves along the shore between the seals and the water, and, at a given signal, spring to their feet and make as much noise as possible. The frightened victims, timid as deer, then stampede up the beach and are driven like sheep a few miles inland, until their captors attack them with hickory clubs. Being knocked senseless, they are stashed with long sharp knives, and the skins are quickly stripped from the bodies. The work is divided among the men—some knocking the seals down, others stabbing them, and still others taking off the skins. The native Indians number about three hundred, and under the terms of the lease are provided gratis by the company with warm houses, sixty tons of coal, a doctor and a schoolmaster, salted meat, and other necessities and comforts. For their labor the men are paid some $40,000 altogether each season, a sum more than sufficient to meet the limited needs of life in a region of almost perpetual fogs and utter isolation.

CITY AND COUNTRY BOYS.

M. Quad's "Short Talk" to the Ambitious Farm Lad.

[Detroit Free Press.]

As to the difference between city and country boys, it lies entirely in the training. The farmer's son may have the most intelligence as a child, but natural intelligence must be trained and cultivated or it becomes lost in the wilderness of ignorance. The country boy has a district school, run in almost any fashion, while the city boy has graded schools conducted on the wisest system. So long as he is kept in the country the farmer's boy has no show at all compared to his friend in town in the matter of education.

We look to a man's personal department before we test his intellectual abilities. The farmer's son has no associates outside of his own class. The semi-social life of the farm has few refining influences. The work must be done whether or no, and farm-workers cannot expect time to cultivate song and music. He is not brought into contact at church socials, parties, lodges, lyceums, etc., while the refined and educated. He grows up in his ways and he remains thus. While the social condition of the American farmer is immeasurably superior to that of any similar class in any country on earth, it is not what it could be made nor what it will be fifty years hence.

And now, my boy let me say to you that no matter what state you live in or what avocation you intend to pursue, you have advantages which you may not fully comprehend. There are no social barriers to keep you down. An honest, truthful, respectable boy or man can step right to the front without capital. His merits are recognized and rewarded. You have advantages over the boy of twenty, ten, or even five years ago. Every progressive step in the country's history helps the boy as well as he man.

Twenty years ago the money of the country was handled by men whose gray hairs were supposed to be proofs of honesty, and the business was in the hands of men past 40. To-day the country is giving the boys golden chances. They are put at the day-books and ledgers, at the cash desks, in banks and post offices, in positions of trust and responsibility everywhere, and the active business is in the hands of men between 25 and 40. But for the boys who are taking an active part in business to-day the wheels would move slowly. You have the advantages and opportunities; if you miss them it is your own fault.

Shakespeare killed two-thirds of all his characters with cold steel. A dozen died from old age, seven were beheaded, five died from poison, two of suffocation, two by strangling, three by snake bites, one from a fall, one is drowned and one is thumped to death with a hand bag.

A FANCY style of hair dressing for the morning, says a fashion journal, "is to wave the hair." We agree with the above. In the morning it is not only a pretty but useful fashion for women to snatch all their hair off the back of the chair where it reposes during the night, and wave it around the room.

This teacher had grown eloquent in picturing to his little pupils the beauties of heaven and he finally asked: "What kind of little boys go to heaven?" A lively four-year-old boy with kicking boots, flourished his fist. "Well, you may answer," said the teacher. "Dead ones!" the little fellow shouted at the extent of his lungs.

There was once a cavalry Colonel, whose sword was valued at $10,000. When a requested to pass, he replied: "So, because I am suffering from agony intestinal!"

A farmer's girl about fifteen years old, before retiring the other night, was told by her mother that if she did not keep the cover on she would have to be punished. This annoyed the little one very much, as she found it difficult to manage the cover. It was her custom to repeat a short prayer before going to bed. After the usual prayer she added: "God bless papa and mamma, and help me to keep the cover on, for Christ's sake. Amen."

Joseph Pulitzer's Career.

It is singular what wonderful changes a few years can bring to a man. Joe Pulitzer, of the New York World, has a singular career. Not many years ago he was a stevedore on the levees at St. Louis. Afterwards he became a coachman for Capt. Jas. B. Eads, of jetty fame. Then an accident gave him a chance to run for the Legislature of Missouri and he was elected. He made some thing of a mark in this position and got a start. Afterward he secured an interest in a German paper at St. Louis, which prospered in his hands, and he took quite an important hand in local affairs. He and Carl Schurz were in the newspaper and the Greely movement together. He sold his German daily at a profit, then bought the Post-Dispatch for a song, and it became worth nearly a million in five years. He sought a broader field of work in New York, got hold of the World which was then a charity patient, and has made it a very valuable property. Now having been about two years a resident of New York city he is elected to Congress from a district in which he does not live and never will reside.—[Philadelphia Times.]

Communication.

WETUMPKA, ALA., Sept. 28, 1834.—About six years ago I became afflicted with a very disagreeable skin disease, with large, dry sores and many crusted pimples on my face, hands and shoulders. The sores on my shoulder eat out a hole nearly an inch deep, and the cancerous appearance of one of the sores near my eye alarmed me very much. I tried all kinds of treatment, but found nothing that seemed to affect the disease. I finally decided to try S. S. S. on advice of a physician, and in a short time the sores dropped from the sores and left my skin smooth and well. I consider S. S. S. the greatest blood medicine made, and the only thing that will cure the disease with which I was afflicted. I think my trouble was the result of a terrible attack of malaria fever, contracted while fanning in the Tallapoosa river swamp. I can be found at my office in the court house at Wetumka. You can refer to me. J. L. RHODES, Dep. Sheriff Elmore Co., Ala.

An explorer behind the scenes of "The Sea of Ice" while Kate Chaston, as the imperilled heroine of that melodrama, was thrilling the audience by perching on a floating piece of berg, says that he was badly shocked to find that the waves were only a row of boys ultimately humped their backs and squatting under a painted cloth, and that the actress' icy craft was a rude box with rockers to it like a cradle.

The oldest person, perhaps, now living in the United States, John S. Ladd, a negro and former slave, who, in August last, celebrated her 116th birthday, and who lives in destitution on the bleak summit of the Sourland Mountain, in Hunterdon county, N. J.—F. Y. Mail.

Advice to Young Men on Marriage.

Get married, my son? Look me in the eye. If you never do anything else in the world, get married. don't be in too big a hurry about it, but don't be too deliberate. It is your duty. Don't think the girls are butterflies of fashion. If you want to marry a laundress do your courting in the laundry; but if you want a wife, marry the girl you love. Be honest with the world; don't sail under false colors. Don't repine over your poverty; it is good for you. We get most of our Presidents from Illinois tanyards and farms and Ohio townships. Don't envy any great man, my boy. The great man with his weight of years and care, envies you every time he passes you by. And if you can't be a leader, double-leaded, a column long, on the second page, you can be something just as useful. You can be a little paying, four-line solid nonpareil "ad" on the inside down under a picture of Lydia Pinkham, and that will help to make up and fill its place in the paper. Be anything in the world, my boy, that is alive and useful. Be any thing but a "dead ad"—Burdett's Boston Lecture.

Tunneling a Volcano.

Some enterprising Yankees have bought a volcano in Mexico, and are tunneling a tunnel into it about halfway up the crater, through which they expect to draw off an enormous quantity of sulphur. Volcanoes in the human system take the form of pimples, boils, and carbuncles. They proceed from weak and impure blood, which Brown's Iron Bitters strengthens and purifies. Mr. Shank, of Petersburg, Va., says, "It caused the eruptions on his skin to entirely disappear."

He Will Not.

Chicago Herald.

When Garfield was inaugurated, Gen. Hancock, his defeated competitor, was the grand marshal of the day, and as such directed the movements of the troops which attracted so much attention on that occasion.

When Abraham Lincoln was inaugurated, Stephen A. Douglas, one of his defeated competitors, stood by his side and held his hat, and when the ceremony was over he was one of the first to tender his congratulations.

When Grover Cleveland was inaugurated next March, will the amiable James G. Blaine stand by and make a hat-rack out of himself for the convenience of the President-elect?

Not much.

George P. Morris wrote "Woodman, Spare That Tree," because the purchaser of a friend's estate wanted to cut a tree which his grandfather had planted. His friend paid the purchaser $10 to spare it. Morris was touched by the story and wrote the song.—N. Y. Graphic.

SEMI-WEEKLY SOUTH KENTUCKIAN.

CHAS. M. REACHAM, - - - Editor

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1885.

Luciano Cipriano, aged 40, was married at Laredo, Tex., to a little girl 11 years old, last Friday.

Rev. H. A. M. Henderson, formerly Superintendent of Public Instruction of Kentucky, will be a candidate for Chaplain of the next House.

The proposed Nicaraguan treaty failed of ratification in the Senate by five votes. The new administration is expected to revive the matter in the spring.

Solomon Batt, and Elias Grosfield, two young Hebrews, of Cincinnati, have renounced the faith of their fathers and joined the Methodist church. They are both Austrians.

The jeans manufacturers, of Louisville and New Albany, have decided to open Feb. 2, all the mills closed by agreement, and run on two-thirds time for two months.

The British army in Egypt is entrenched near Metemneh and quietly awaiting re-inforcements. The wounded, including Gen. Stewart, are getting along well and recovering rapidly.

Criminal prosecutions have been begun against a number of New York druggists for dealing in adulterated quinine. Some samples were found to be adulterated fully 50 per cent.

Poor England is having a hard time of it. Forty of her subjects were killed in a railway collision in New South Wales last Friday. It seems that the Arabs, the dynamiters and the reckless engineers are rapidly depopulating the Queen's dominions.

St. John, the cold water apostle, who ran for "something or other" last year, is on the war-path in Kentucky. He will speak at Williams-town the 5th, Frankfort the 6th, Louisville the 8th and Elizabethtown the 9th. He will then move south into Tennessee.

The virtuous Indiana Legislature has passed a bill prohibiting the playing of baseball on Sunday. We presume the game was regarded as a "base" desecration of the Sabbath, or it may be that the beer gardens objected to competition.

The New Hampshire Legislature does not meet until June and the term of Senator Blair expires Mar. 4. It will therefore fall upon Gov. Hale to appoint a senator for this interval. Senator Blair is a candidate for reelection for the full term but it is probable that the Governor will complement soon one of his personal friends by the three month's appointment.

Gov. Cleveland is evidently going to try to "split the difference." He has invited both Carlisle and Randall to come to Albany and counsel with him. He has also announced that he will be in New York City this week for the purpose of giving audience to all Congressmen who have views to express.

The Hon. Jonathan Chase, elected to succeed Senator Anthony from Rhode Island, dresses in the traditional Quaker costume of half a century ago, and in private conversation uses the "thees" and "thous" of the Quaker language, although in his addresses he adheres to the more modern style of speech. Like the strict constructionists of his sect, he holds to the peace theory, and can never be persuaded to vote on appropriation bills for maintenance of the army or navy, or to nominate cadets for West Point or Annapolis.—Exchange.

A silly paragraph which originated in an Owensboro paper intimating a startling state of affairs among some of the State officials at Frankfort, has been going the rounds of the State press, and has thus been given a consequence to which it is not entitled. The report probably arose from a foolish jest, and, while there is not a shadow of truth for its foundation, it is proper to say there is not a State official at Frankfort whose office is not thoroughly sound and correct. The Owensboro paper owes it to itself to make good its insinuation or acknowledge it was imposed upon.—Courier-Journal.

There comes from a reliable source, which the Commercial will be at liberty to mention whenever it is necessary, an explanation of the origin of the Owensboro Messenger's strong hint at some startling official dishonesty at Frankfort. Our information is to the effect that the Messenger's alleged informant is none other than the genial Col. H. M. McCarty, the Assistant Secretary of State. This gentleman denies making any such statement as is imputed to him, and a correspondence is in progress between the parties, so far without a satisfactory result. Friends of both parties are of the opinion that some jocular expression of Col. McCarty has been understood seriously by an editor of the Messenger, who has but a slight acquaintance with him. If this explanation is correct it shows the facts to be very much as we supposed them to be, though unaware of the name of the Messenger's adviser. It is to be regretted that a newspaper so reliable as our contemporary should have been hasty in making such a publication.—Louisville Commercial.

State Finances.

Referring to the subject of possible irregularities in the departments of the State government, the Louisville Commercial has this to say: "The Commercial has no charge to make on the State officers, but if they desire, as the Capital suggests, to have an open examination of the books made, the Commercial will furnish an expert accountant, whose character and ability shall be established to the satisfaction of the Governor, and will pay all his expenses and his salary to make a thorough and impartial investigation of the books for the benefit of the people of the State, the State officers and the truth generally."

In reply to this the Frankfort Yeoman says: "In this connection we are authorized to say that the reporter of any newspaper who desires to obtain information upon any point affecting the State's finances will be afforded reasonable facility for doing so, but the proposal to permit an expert book-keeper to step in and overhaul the entire business of the State at the instance and cost of a newspaper, or of any private citizen, is not proper, and should not be entertained. It would take such a man with a full corps of clerks not less than six months to complete such a work, and when he had finished, his results would not be accepted as properly authorized. The public work would be greatly and unnecessarily impeded by such a proceeding, to say nothing of the utter folly of taking an action upon a report which gives no direction to inquiry, and aims directly at no particular officer or department."

The Owensboro Messenger, which by innuendo started the discussion in regard to the State finances, endorses the Commercial's proposition, but still refrains from preferring charges, or giving the name of its informant. Unless the Messenger is willing to do this, the agitation of the question will accomplish nothing. No officer should be expected to permit unauthorized persons to pry into his books until his integrity is questioned. The fact is that the State treasury has been depleted by incompetent legislation. It will be remembered that it took the last Legislature several weeks, at an expense of $1,000 a day, to elect a Senator. It will also be remembered that many useless and extravagant appropriations of the people's money were made by that body of alleged statesmen. This sort of business has kept the State treasury empty ever since. What money has been paid in has been paid out so quickly that there was but little chance for dishonest officials to appropriate it, even were there such in office. The Yeoman very sensibly gives the objections to the proposed investigation. We have heard of no one who believes that Auditor Hewitt or Treasurer Tate are dishonest. If there are such persons, perhaps a perusal of the reports issued from their offices would enlighten them upon the subject of State finances and possibly remove their suspicions. Unless there is a charge made, what need of investigation? If there is no "motion" before the house, discussion is "out of order."

The Next Senate.

Twenty-five new Senators will take their seats Mar. 4. Of these, twelve have already been elected to succeed themselves, viz: Allison, Brown, Call, Cameron, (Penn.), Hampton, Ingalls, Morrill, Platt, Pugh, Vance, Vest and Voorhees. Eight other states have held their elections with the following results: In California, Leland Stanford succeeds Jas. T. Farley; in Colorado, H. M. Teller succeeds N. P. Hill; in Kentucky, J. C. S. Blackburn succeeds J. S. Williams; in Louisiana, J. B. Eastlands succeeds B. F. Jonas; in Maryland, E. K. Wilson succeeds J. B. Groome; in New York, Wm. M. Everts succeeds E. G. Lapham; in Ohio, H. B. Payne succeeds Geo. H. Pendleton and in Wisconsin, J. C. Spooner succeeds Angus Cameron. In the states of Arkansas, Illinois, Nevada and Oregon Senators will be elected by the Legislatures now in session. In New Hampshire the Legislature will not meet until June and a Senator will be appointed for three months by the Governor. In the elections already held the Republicans have gained one Senator in California—and will gain another in Oregon. The Legislature of Illinois, which will elect a Senator to succeed Logan, is a tie. In the remaining states there will be no change. The next Senate will therefore stand, Republicans, 41; Democrats, 34; doubtful 1. Granting that a Republican will be elected in Illinois, the Republican majority will be 8. If there are no changes in the political complexion of the Legislatures two years hence, the Democrats will gain a Senator in three states—Indiana, Ohio and Virginia—and lose two—in New Jersey and Nevada. The present House stands, Democrats, 182; Republicans, 140; Greenbacker, 1; Fusion, 1; vacancy, 1.

A Texas editor has given up his newspaper and gone to editing a sheep ranch. He should make a success. No man is more graceful with the shears and clippers than a newspaper man. He will doubtless do eweman service in his new field.—Capital.

Unless his style is rambling, or he allows the "wool" to be pulled over his eyes he may be able to "wether" through without being "feced."

An old negro named Gabe Walker, 95 years old, was married in Sumter county, Ga., last Wednesday

A copy of The Tribune (N. Y.) Almanac for 1885, which is just out, has been received by this office. The Tribune Almanac was one of the hobbies of Mr. Greeley; and it became under him, what it has been ever since—an accepted authority in regard to the general election returns and the important statistics of the country. The number for 1885 contains complete and carefully prepared tables, showing in great detail the vote of the country for President in 1884. An effort has been made to compile an absolutely correct statement of the result. The list of Congressmen will be consulted with interest, as will also the official statement of the new postage rates, and the statistics of the operation of the new tariff law. The general information of The Almanac is, as usual, presented in great variety; and as a handy book of easy reference, it is a work which every thinking citizen ought to have, and to which he will find himself referring hundreds of times a year. Price, 30 cents a copy.

MARVELS OF THE UNIVERSE.

Prof. Young, the mathematician and astronomer, gives us some concrete illustrations of the marvels of the universe that are fascinating in their way. The traveler who would make the circuit of the world in eight days would require nearly twenty-four years to circumnavigate the sun. The sun's surface is nearly 12,000 times, and its volume or bulk more than 1,300,000 times greater than that of the earth. If the earth is represented by a three-inch globe, the sun, on the same scale, will be more than twenty-seven feet in diameter, and its distance 3,000 feet. If the sun were hollow, and the earth at its center, there would be room for the moon 240,000 miles away, and for another 190,000 miles beyond her. The mass of the sun, that is, the quantity of matter contained in it, is nearly 330,000 times as great as that of the earth. This mass is about 750 times as great as the combined masses of all the planets and satellites of the solar system; it is two octillions of tons. The attractive pull of this tremendous mass upon the earth at a distance of nearly 93,000 miles again transcends all conception. It is thirty-six quadrillions of tons; in figures thirty-six followed by seventeen ciphers. If gravitation were to cease, and steel wires were used to hold the earth in her orbit, each wire being as large as the heaviest telegraph wire (No. 4), it would require nine to each square inch of the earth's surface, and the whole sunward hemisphere of our globe would have to be covered as thickly as blades of grass upon a lawn. A man who on earth would weigh 250 pounds, would at the sun weigh nearly two tons, and be unable to stir. A planet as far away as the nearest fixed star, which is more than 200,000 times more remote than the sun from the earth, if not disturbed by any other attractions, would still be governed in its motion by the sun, though, if moving in a circle, nearly 90,000,000 years would be required for a single revolution. If the motion seems slow it is because the distance is so vast; but the planet would still be held so powerfully in its orbit that it could only free itself from solar attraction by darting away with a velocity of more than 800 feet a second.—Boston Advertiser.

A handbook, giving a general account of the Jews, by Dr. R. Andree, estimates their total number throughout the world at about 6,100,000. Only 180,000 of the race are to be found in Asia, 400,000 in Africa, 300,000 in America and 20,000 in Australia. The great majority of the race, more than 5,000,000, live in Europe. Roumania contains a far larger number of Jews, in proportion to its population than any other European country, namely, 7.44 per cent., while Norway contains only thirty-four individuals of the race. The local distribution of the Jewish population in different countries is traced out with great pains by Dr. Andree. Thus in some of the government districts of Russian Poland the Jewish inhabitants constitute from 13 to 18 per cent of the population. Although for the whole of Germany the Jewish element is only 1½ per cent of the population, in the city of Berlin it has increased to nearly 5 per cent.
